Bay seeking relief from problems with Waveland wastewater district

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK
The Bay St. Louis City Council is seeking "solutions" to the problems the city has been experiencing lately with the Waveland Regional Wastewater District.
Bay St. Louis Mayor Victor J. Frankiewicz Jr. was asked Tuesday by some members of the council to do whatever possible to solve these problems even if it meant finding a way to withdraw from the wastewater district.
The council also voted to subtract $308 from the city's June payment to the wastewater district, which is a reduction to offset a recent $150,000 advance to the county by the district.
Frankiewicz recommended reducing the payment so the city will not be making a loan payment on money that was advanced to the county district which has no existing method to repay the money.
"I believe it is a misappropriation of the funds," he said.
Frankiewicz opposed giving this money to the county but wastewater district officials contend these funds can be used on related project.
"My concern is $300,000 of interest-free money from the state, earmarked for treatment of sewerage, has been diverted for studies and engineering fees for collection of sewerage," Councilman James C. Thriffley III said.
"People outside the cities are getting the benefit of sewerage studies without paying one penny," Thriffley said Wednesday.
"I am in favor of these studies and providing sewerage to people outside the cities if the wastewater district can find a way to assess a charge the way people in Bay St. Louis have paid for the last five to six years," he continued.
Thriffley says he favors this kind of progress throughout the county but residents and property owners of Bay St. Louis should not be charged two and three times for the same service.
This is what happened when county general funds were used to pay engineering fees of more than $400,000 to provide sewerage for many people "who don't want it and cannot afford to pay for it," he added.
The estimate at this time for providing sewer service to persons outside the cities is at $10,000 per household which includes construction and engineering fees, Thriffley said.
"It doesn't take a genius to figure out this type of planning will be devastating to the overall economic future of Hancock County including the cities of Waveland and Bay St. Louis in spite of a portion of the construction costs being paid by the government," Thriffley said.
The maintenance expenses will be "horrendous," he added.
There has to be a better and more practical solution which allows potential users and property owners in the proposed district to pay a fair share for all studies, engineering work and eventually construction, he said.
The district was set up to handle treatment but collection projects must stand on their own, Thriffley said.
"People in the county district are receiving a service and should not expect taxes paid to the county or the cities to cover their interest in a sewer system," he added.
"When consumers in the outside district learn what actual out-of-pocket expenses and monthly bills will cost I would not be surprised to see a petition against the project," Thriffley said.
"It is very easy to say give people something as long as it does not involve any cost but when people have to pay either millage or a special assessment for the studies preceding the construction I don't think anyone involved will be willing to pay for five years before the system comes in front of their homes," he added.
"If they are willing to pay for it I say let's go forward with it and let the county district pay its own way just like the cities of Waveland and Bay St. Louis do," Thriffley said.
He also encouraged residents and property owners outside the city to get involved in finding out exactly what their costs are going to be.

"The bottom line is that the consumers and property owners in Waveland and Bay St. Louis who are paying to have sewer treated, are not benefiting from the interest-free loan being granted by the state legislature," Thriffley said.
Therefore people in Waveland and Bay St. Louis are paying as much as 12.5 to 14 percent over what would they would have to pay in the interest-free loan funds were used for treatment and not collection, he added.
"I am looking for solutions that can justify taking interest free money earmarked for giving relief to the residents and taxpayers of Waveland and Bay St. Louis and using it to provide collection and engineering expenses for a system that is years away from being used by the people who live outside the cities," he said.

"Everyone should pay a fair share but not one person outside of the cities is being billed for engineering fees and studies and not one property owner is paying any increased millage to cover the project," Thriffley said.
The expenses are being underwritten by the users and property owners in Waveland and Bay St. Louis, he said.

Supervisor proposes county paving plan

BY DENA BISNETTE
The Hancock County Board of Supervisors has agreed to obtain a state attorney general's opinion on funding for a proposed plan to surface 150 miles of road.
Because a verbal opinion is considered unofficial, Board Attorney Gerald Gex said he will request a written opinion, which is unlikely to arrive before the board's July 13 meeting.
The question the opinion will have to address is whether the county can use road and bridge maintenance funds to repay bonds.
Beat One Supervisor Bert Courge made the proposal for the road paving program late during Monday morning's meeting of the board.
Courge began by stating that the county had lost about $350,000 in revenue sharing funds, which he said would have to be considered when the board starts working on the coming year's budget in August.
These funds were generally used to put asphalt surfaces on roads that were formerly dirt and clay gravel.
"We could plan half of our maintenance money for new asphalt. That would cut our maintenance costs in half because an asphalt road is easier to maintain than a dirt road," Courge explained.
The Beat One supervisor explained that the county could actually borrow the money to pave the roads, then could repay the bonds out of road and bridge maintenance funds.
He said such a project would probably cost about $5 million.
Gex said he is not certain that maintenance funds can be used in that manner.
Beat Two Supervisor and Board President A.A. Kellar said, "As soon as we advertised our intent, we would get a petition for a vote."
"I believe people would vote for it," Beat Five Supervisor James Travira said.
Courge explained that using maintenance funds to repay the bonds would keep the board from having to raise taxes for that particular purpose.
"We'll never see another inch of blacktop road if we don't do something like this," he said.
Beat Three Supervisor Roger Dale Ladner suggested that the board discuss the matter with County Maintenance Superintendent Bill Johnson to determine whether such a project would be feasible, but agreed with the rest of the board to wait for the attorney general's opinion.
Courge said the easiest part of the project would be preparing a list of roads to pave, based on the number of residences on each or how much the road is used.
No new paving has been done during the 1986-87 fiscal year, Johnson said. He stated that overlay and paving is considered capital outlay rather than maintenance and falls under the jurisdiction of the board rather than his office.
About 50 percent of maintenance cost is grading of unpaved roads, and paving could not only reduce the need for grading but could reduce costs for machine maintenance, clay gravel, fuel, manhours and other related items.

"Repair costs on graders are astronomical," Johnson said.
"They're probably the most expensive piece of equipment we have as far as repair and parts replacement."
"We also spend a great deal of money on clay gravel," he added.
Even if the funding method is approved and the board members agree to try the project, there still would be some roads in the county that would probably not be cost-effective to pave due to low population density or low use, the

Hancock County School District passes $15.4 million budget

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK
The Hancock County School Board adopted a $15.4 million budget Monday which includes nearly $7.6 million of capital improvements and building projects.
Excluding the capital improvements and building project, the operating budget shows a nine percent increase over last year.
The figure for capital improvements and the building project includes a $6.6 million bond issue, $600,000 State Educational Finance Committee construction funds and $400,000 surplus.
The $7.6 budget for school district operations does not reflect as high an increase as the budget could legally have.
With this increase of approximately $350,000, the budget for operating the school district is $7,192,257.

According to Business Manager Greg Jones the main increase in the budget is approximately $160,000 in salary increases and fringe benefits for both certified and non-certified employees.
Another $100,000 of the budget increase will be used to purchase four new school buses, he said.
The rest of the increase will be used to pay salaries for new positions including four new teachers, a curriculum coordinator and operations maintenance supervisor.
(See a related story for more details on the budget in this issue of the Echo.)
Also at the meeting the board okayed a revised list of salary supplements for employees who participate in extra-curricular activities.
Topping the list of salary supplements is a sum of $2,500 for basketball (boys) and football head coaches.

The girls basketball head coach will receive a salary supplement of $2,300.
Assistant coaches and the junior high football coach will receive $1,500.
The band director gets an additional $1,600.
Baseball and softball coaches get a supplement of $750 and the tennis coach will get $400.
No decision has been made on the amount of supplement for track coaches.
Teachers serving as department heads in the schools will get an additional $500.
Members of a Local Survey Committee, the librarian aide and computer supervisor aid, each will receive a supplement of $500.

The yearbook advisor will get an extra $900.

Residents ask aldermen to open Victoria Street

BY DENA BISNETTE
The Waveland Board of Aldermen has decided to obtain an engineer's safety report before acting on a request to open the rest of Victoria Street.
A group of about five Victoria Street residents, represented by spokesman Felton Cuevas, have asked that the entire street be opened.
Presently, a section of the street leading to a warehouse operated by Charles Johnson is open.
Cuevas and the other residents also had a complaint regarding the warehouse operation, which they feel may be in violation of the city zoning ordinance.
According to Cuevas, the residents had no objections to the operation of Johnson's facility as a mini-warehouse leasing storage facilities, but now they feel the warehouse is "becoming industrial."

Cuevas provided the board with several photographs he had taken of the facility, which showed industrial-type cable spools stacked in front of one of the building's outside walls.
He complained that industrial uses of the facility will eventually result in tractor-trailer rigs using Victoria Street, which he says may not be safe anyway.
He explained that there are two old cesspools "right in the middle of the street" and that a shell drain cuts across the street.
Cuevas explained that a school bus uses the street and that there is a sinkhole over one of the old cesspools already.
He said the road had been closed for more than 50 years and was recently opened, apparently without any consultation between city officials and Victoria Street residents.

MPC Safety Program: on the road with a powerful message

Art Morrison preaches common sense—the kind that can save your life.

As supervisor of claims for Mississippi Power Company, Morrison has been on the circuit for safety for the last two years, preaching his doctrine to more than 8,000 students, factory workers, civic club members and anyone else who will listen.

Morrison heads up the Gulfport-based utility's public safety awareness program which focuses attention on the importance of electrical safety.

"You only have to see one serious accident involving electricity and see the injuries, pain and the effect on families to want to spend every waking hour to prevent these accidents from happening," he said.

Improper use or handling of electricity can pose a real threat of people in all walks of life. National statistics show 60 percent of all fatal electrical accidents involve common household current. Most electrocutions are caused by faulty or non-grounded appliances, frayed electrical cords or appliances coming in contact with water.

One of the most effective aspects of Morrison's safety program is a graphic slide presentation showing injuries caused by electricity.

I want people to understand the severe injuries caused by electric shock. We are not talking about blisters on the skin, but injuries that often lead to death," Morrison said.

A popular attraction in Morrison's safety show is a scaled down model displaying houses, trees, automobiles and their relationship to power lines.

The power lines in the "Safety City" model carry an actual current of 12,000 volts to show what happens when things come in contact with high voltage electricity.

Audiences see electricity arc to ladders, kites and automobiles when Morrison depicts real-life situations on the model.

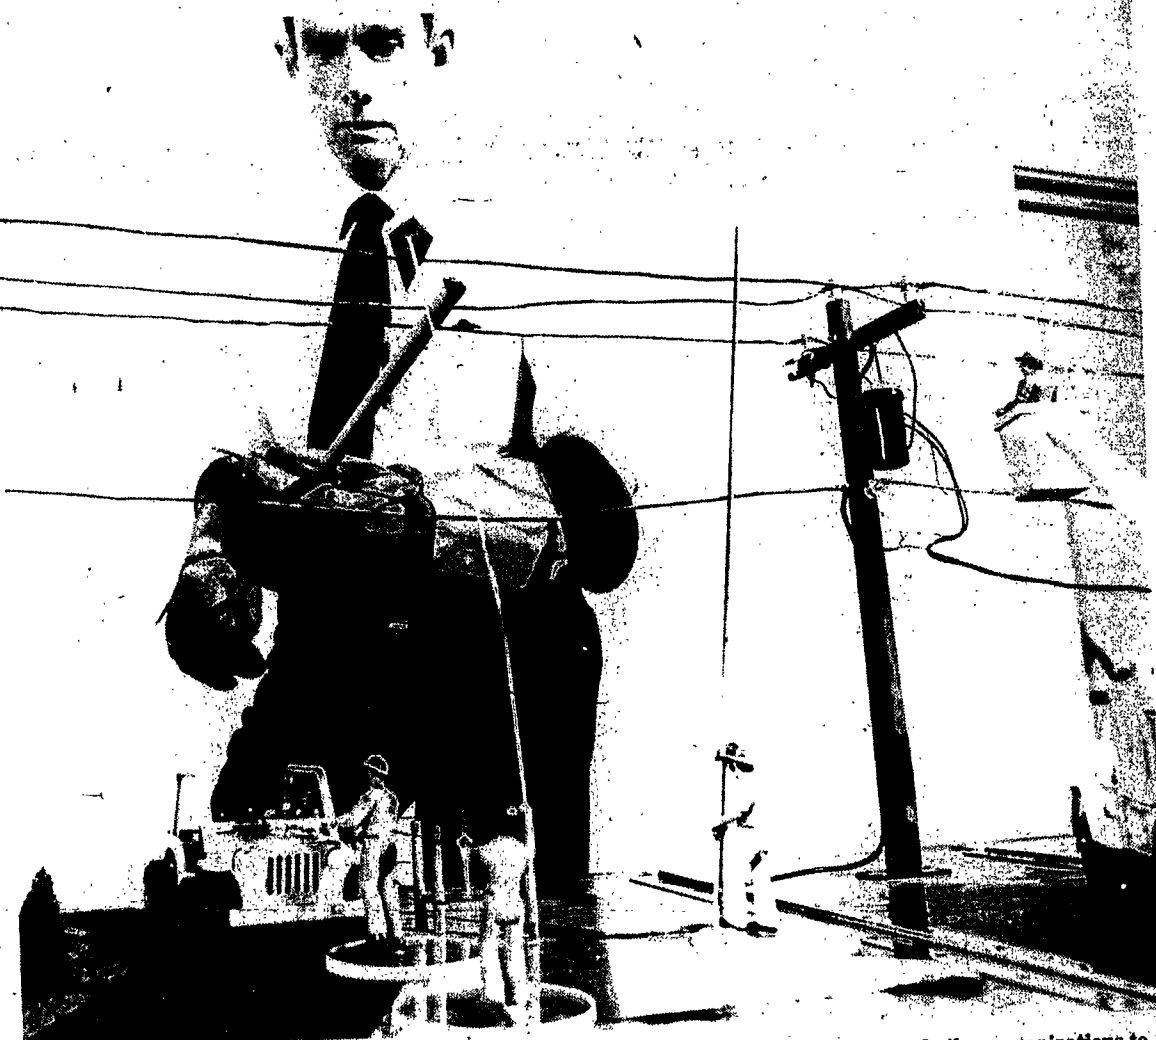

Mississippi Power company decided to promote the public safety program as one of its many community service projects, but the popularity of Morrison's presentation quickly set it apart from the rest. In fact, one large company in the utility's service area has incorporated the safety program for its own employees.

"I have been amazed at the number of requests to put on this program for civic and church groups, schools and even other companies," said Morrison. "But considering the important message presented, I am glad people are wanting to listen."

If anyone is interested in having Morrison present the program they can contact him in Gulfport at 865-5336.

Victoria.....

Another Victoria Street resident said she feels opening the other end of the street might be helpful because trailers going to a nearby mobile home park could use that route rather than disrupting traffic as they do now.

Cuevas said opening Victoria and Ladner Streets as the city has done indicates to him that all of the city's streets should be opened.

He also asked that Faith Street, where he said he owns property, be opened.

Ward One Alderman Barbara Rappold, whose ward includes Victoria Street, said the first action she wanted the board to take would be determining whether or not the section of Victoria Street already open is safe.

The board voted to ask to city's engineering firm, Ray Eaton and Associates, to provide a report on the road's safety.

Mayor John Longo Jr. said the city may opt to close the road again if it is declared unsafe.

He explained to Cuevas that although the city has some dedicated streets that have never been opened, there are not funds available to open them all.

Cuevas said he had checked with Hancock County supervisor Sam Pernicaro who told him the city can request the county's assistance for repairing streets.

Victoria Street, however, is in Beat Two, Supervisor A.A. Kellar's jurisdiction. Rappold said she preferred to talk to Kellar to find out if funds are available to both repair and maintain the road before taking any specific action on a request.

The matter of the alleged zoning violation was turned over to Board Attorney Lucien Gex, who will determine how Johnson is using the property and whether that use is allowed under its Commercial-3 zoning.

In other business, the board: —Took under advisement bids on a surplus Waveland Fire Department car; —Approved use of Martin Luther King Jr. Park on Herlihey Street for a summer recreation program back-to-school festival on Aug. 29; and —Requested Eaton and Associates to determine if a privately operated sand mining pit on Nicholson Avenue presents a public danger.

Each time he fights, we win.

As a combat leader in Vietnam, he faced a new battle each day.

Now, Cono Caranna is fighting his battles in the courtroom, against a different kind of enemy. Drugs, rape, murder. All the felonies in our District. And he's winning.

Under Cono Caranna, our District Attorney's office is handling more court cases than ever before in its history. Over 2,000 last year alone. With more jury trials than ever before.

And he's filed for over one million dollars in confiscated cash and cars from drug pushers.

But Cono's commitment doesn't stop there. He's gone into the classrooms of our schools and established important programs to help keep our kids off the streets and out of trouble. Programs like Latchkey and Me-ology.

Cono Caranna has restored our faith in the D.A.'s office. He's reminded us what good public service is all about.

He's redefined the job of District Attorney. Made the D.A.'s office a strong partner in the fight against crime.

And in the process, he's given us hope for a brighter future.

It's not an easy job, but it's his job. That's why he keeps on fighting. And that's why he keeps on winning.

That's why, he's our D.A.

Quotables by CUEVAS

This is the time of the year when there are not too many flowers in our area.

We have noted the many crepe myrtles which are now in full bloom.

One of the projects of the Bay-Waveland Garden Club is to have at least one crepe myrtle tree in each lot in our area.

If this were a reality, wouldn't this be a beautiful display of flowers in our community at this time of the year?

Like many residents we have planted several in our yard and are hoping others will do the same.

It looked like everyone waited until the July Fourth weekend to visit our county.

It has been a long time since we had so many people in our area.

There were so many big events over the weekend and we hope everyone had a good time.

We did see a lot of folks fishing and boating over the weekend.

We did see our Game and Fish agents checking boats for proper equipment in the Bay over the holidays.

If you fish in areas designated as fresh water, remember fishing licenses expired on June 30.

It has been some time since I have been fishing, but I am now making plans to get out and try my luck.

At one time in my life I fished every weekend of the year, and even managed to catch a few.

Good fishing to everyone.

All residents awoke to a big surprise on Tuesday morning in Hancock County.

The first surprise was the crashing of thunder and the next was the amount of water which fell in the area.

Yards and streets were completely flooded with many people not being able to get to work.

Wrecker services were kept busy hauling in stranded vehicles which had been overcome by water on the streets.

Our area drainage systems were not able to handle the downpour. Many people got soaked, even with raincoats, just getting to their vehicles.

It has been a long time since we have had such a heavy rain.

So what do we get on Wednesday morning? More rain.

We can remember this time last year when area lawns were burning because of a lack of water.

We can talk about the weather, but we cannot do anything about it.

From Mississippi Economic Council

Productivity has been a key issue when discussing the success of the Japanese and the problems in the American workplace.

But American productivity is still better than that of the Japanese, only they have made bigger strides in a shorter period of time.

That message was delivered by a spokesman for the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta speaking to a group of economic education teachers on the Gulf Coast last week.

Larry Schulz said the Japanese will be confronting some of the same issues that have faced business in America, such as incorporating women and minorities into the professional workplace.

As for now, Schulz said a woman graduate of a Japanese university

"hardly has a chance of getting a good job."

And Japanese students, he said, show excellence in the classroom because of the large number of hours spent studying.

Schulz was one of several speakers at the Summer Institute for Teachers sponsored by the American Enterprise Center, the economic education arm of the Mississippi Economic Council.

Thirty teachers from around the state attended the annual week-long conference to gain a better understanding of instruction of the free enterprise system.

This is the eighth year the workshop has been conducted.

CONGRESS TODAY—Congressman Trent Lott will be joined by Congresswoman Nancy Johnson of New Britain, Connecticut, at 12:30 p.m., Sunday on "Congress Today" which airs on WLOX-TV, Channel 13, in Biloxi. Lott will interview his colleague on the Congressional budget process from her perspective on the House Budget Committee and about the pending welfare reform bill which Mrs. Johnson is helping to draft. The public affairs program airs monthly.

IN CONGRESS

By Cong. Trent Lott

A top priority of the federal government should be preparedness and immediate assistance in the aftermath of a natural disaster.

When, in any time or situation, is the federal government more needed and more responsible than after a natural disaster?

I was outraged at the lack of response to the needs of disaster victims of Hurricane Elena in 1985 by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), the federal authority with the mandate to provide financial assistance to communities overwhelmed by disasters.

To make matters worse, last year FEMA announced it wanted to reduce the federal reimbursement to states and local governments for eligible costs to 50 percent.

I joined a number of my colleagues in complaining about this proposed regulation last July when I testified before a House oversight committee and offered some suggestions for improvement.

At that time, I told the panel that FEMA's mindset after Hurricane Elena was to offer the least assistance at the least possible cost.

But hopefully help is now on the way. I am cosponsoring legislation which responds to the years of complaints by disaster victims and by state and local emergency management professionals.

With the passage of this bill, the President for the first time would be required to provide for the varying debris removal needs in communities.

At my request, the Department of Defense, including the Seabees from the Naval Construction Battalion Center in Gulfport and airmen from Keesler Air Force Base in Biloxi, would be freed to utilize their resources, particularly in the immediate aftermath of a disaster.

This provision alone would be a major improvement in FEMA's operations. The Seabees in particular have the capability and equipment to provide immediate debris removal, and our disaster relief laws should facilitate their mobilization without the red tape and bureaucracy we have encountered in the past.

The bill also would require FEMA to pay 100 percent of the cost of temporary housing and extend the availability of that shelter from 12 months to 18 months.

Most important, FEMA would be required to make every effort to offer temporary housing to eligible disaster victims within seven days of application.

The bill for the first time would offer federal funds for hazard prevention work performed by states and local governments to strengthen buildings and infrastructure in hopes of lessening the damage from some disasters.

I am very optimistic about this legislation's prospects. Despite budgetary pressures, Congress has continued to insist that the federal government pay a fair share of the costs of coping with a federal disaster.

One good indication of Congress' commitment came just last week when it agreed to language I requested in the 1987 Supplemental Appropriations to retain the "hurricane hunters" at Keesler Air Force Base in Biloxi.

For years, the hurricane hunters have proven to be an invaluable resource in tracking storms, reporting on their degrees of danger, projecting their eventual paths and assisting in evacuation calls and plans.

Disaster assistance and funding for the hurricane hunters are two expenditures I hope we do not have to make this year. But in the event of a natural disaster, with the federal government providing these tools of preparedness, there is no doubt in my mind that Mississippians will supply the grit to handle the situation.

Eyes on Mississippi

By Bill Minor

JACKSON—The flap over public use of Bogue Chitto River down in Pike County calls to mind the struggle 15 years ago by an obscure citizen from Picaune who knocked down a 19th century state law defining public streams in Mississippi.

A mild-mannered carpenter from Picaune named Mansfield Downes became a hero of this writer back in 1972 when he proved that once in a while a plain, ordinary citizen can take on powerful forces, including the Mississippi Legislature, and win.

Downes and the courage to challenge an 1870s state law defining public streams because he believed the law was not only obsolete, but deprived thousands of citizens from having recreational use of hundreds of miles of waterways around the state.

The musty old law had provided that to be open to public use, a stream had to be able to float a steamboat carrying 200 bales of cotton for 30 consecutive days a year.

There weren't any cotton-totin' steamboats around to test the law, of course, but the obvious impact of the law put virtually 90 percent of the natural flowing streams within the state under control of adjacent property owners rather than granting public access.

Downes used himself as a guinea pig to test the steamboat law on Hobbschitto Creek in Pearl River County in 1970 by paddling a skiff on the stream within land owned by the powerful Crosby family of Picaune.

The gritty carpenter was arrested, just as he expected to be. That set up a court case, which Downes brought all the way to the State Supreme Court.

But the old steamboat law proved unsinkable and Downes lost his case in the high court.

Undaunted, Downes began waging a lonely campaign to get the Legislature to change the old law on public streams to give the people back what he believed was a fundamental right to use their waterways.

He enlisted the help of Pearl River County's two state legislators, then Rep. Lonnie Smith of Picaune and Sen. Martin Smith of Poplarville (significantly, Smith who has served for 20 years in the state Senate, is retiring this year).

When he could take time off his work, Downes would stalk the Capitol corridors urging lawmakers to support the public streams bill. Arrayed against him were the powerful lobbyists for the State Farm Bureau Federation, pipeline companies and other business lobbies which did not want to disturb private interests protected by the old law.

Against all those odds and with the floor support of his county lawmakers, Downes proudly saw his public streams bill clear the Legislature by a squeaker in April, 1972. It was signed into law by then Gov. Bill Waller, and Downes was on hand to watch, his gnarled hands nervously twitching.

The 1972 law did away with the old steamboat test and proclaimed as public waterways any stream that is at least five miles long with an average depth of three feet along the thread, and at least 30 feet wide during low water.

On such streams, the law spelled out, the public had the right of "free transport, and the right to fish and engage in water sports," but would do so at their own risk.

Downes' law opened to citizens recreational use untold miles of streams around the state from which they could have been legally barred by landowners. It struck a major blow for the public interest over private interests.

This is the same law that was brought into play in the legal battle which erupted the past couple of weeks when part of Bogue Chitto River near McComb was closed to boaters and tubers when several landowners complained to the sheriff that public use of the river put them at risk of lawsuits.

After a day-long hearing last Friday, Chancery Judge R. B. Reeves decided that Downes' public stream law was still valid. He ordered the scenic Bogue Chitto opened to public use, just in time for canoeists and tubers to enjoy it on the 4th of July weekend.

It was the kind of occasion that would have brought joy to Mansfield Downes for what he had done in behalf of the public interest years ago.

But Mansfield is no longer around to share in the credit for his law. Two years ago, at age 60, the modest little carpenter passed away.

Significantly, he died still fighting for a cause in behalf of the public interest—trying to reclaim for Mississippi the lower Pearl River which he said was wrongly diverted to Louisiana many years ago.

ASK OCHSNER

Q: Each year I make up a list of New Year's resolutions which always includes losing weight. Will it really make that much difference in my health as to whether I end up taking off my excess or not? R.L., Grammercy, La.

A: Losing an extra ten pounds can be beneficial to your health in helping to prevent other diseases. According to Dr. Thomas Feagin, head of community internal medicine at Ochsner Clinic in New Orleans, people can actually prevent or delay the onset of 51 percent of the things likely to kill them, simply by changing their lifestyles. This includes maintaining a proper weight.

There are five general areas, he says, where an individual's own efforts can reduce his or her health risks: (1) seatbelts (2) micro-environmental pollution, i.e., smoking and drinking (3) nutrition (4) physical fitness and (5) mental well-being.

The single most controllable health risk is smoking. There is no good derived from smoking, and the harm it does is well documented, from cancer to heart disease.

There is some theoretical benefit to be derived from a low level of alcohol intake. It can increase the level of a beneficial cholesterol called high-density lipoprotein. But the risks of alcohol are so great that most physicians hesitate to recommend its use at all.

There are three components to exercise—cardiovascular endurance, flexibility and strength.

Cardiovascular endurance is the chief benefit of many popular exercises, from jogging to aerobics. But very strenuous running may not be the most advisable for a given person.

The goal is long, slow distance training. Walking is ideal, swimming and stationary bicycling are good. Flexibility and strength tend to be somewhat neglected by the aerobic fitness enthusiasts.

The first step in proper nutrition is to calculate your body weight. For most men, that can be calculated by this formula: to a base weight of 100 pounds, add six pounds for each over five feet.

Reduce the proportion of animal fat in your diet from the American average of 50 percent of caloric intake to about 25 to 30 percent. Avoid fried foods, reduce red meat and whole milk intake, use fish and vegetable sources for more of your protein.

An increase in dietary fiber is also beneficial. That can come from fresh fruit and vegetables, whole wheat products, peanuts and bran, among other things.

Mental well-being has three aspects—management of the stress in your life, a support network of family and friends, and what could be called the transcendental or spiritual dimension. This can be anything from religious belief to music or laughter—anything that takes you out of yourself.

Clearly, not all determinants of lifespan are under the control of the individual. There are genetic components in some health risks—cancer and heart disease, for instance.

But prospective medical specialists feel the average span of years in which an individual could reasonably expect to function at or near potential could be increased to between 85 and 90 by widespread adoption of proper preventative measures, which is reason enough to stick to your New Year's resolution.

We need the festivals

July 6, 1987
The Sea Coast Echo
Court Street
Bay St. Louis
Attn: Editor

Dear Sir:

I was delighted with this year's Crab Festival. Those who did not sample the barbecued crabs missed a tasty, but messy delicacy. By all estimates, the festival must be judged a success. By my standard measurements, it was.

Each weekend during the summer finds me picking up enough litter on Sunday evenings to fill a Schwegmann's bag. Last night I had the pleasure of packing two such bags with cups, bottles, food wrappers, pieces of styrofoam, etc.

Probably, my quota would have been three bags had not some can collectors worked North Beach earlier in the afternoon. If the sponsors of such events or the city were to place litter receptacles at strategic locations along the thoroughfares, my involuntary participation in these events would be lessened as would that of my neighbors.

Not only that, but our first inclination, that is to regard the litter-bugs as some type of lower class swine, would probably not even manifest itself.

Finally, a port-a-potty along the way would not be a bad idea either. It is amazing that no impatient but needy soul fell from the sea wall while attending to that which must be attended to immediately.

Despite these comments, we are glad that the festival went so well. We need the Beachfront Festival, the Crab Festival and similar events in our city.

Sincerely,
H. Book Hopkins
Bay St. Louis

This is a paid political announcement, which is intended as a public service for the voters of Mississippi. It has been submitted to and approved and subscribed by each political candidate listed or by the candidate's campaign manager or assistant campaign manager. This listing is not intended to suggest or imply that these are the only candidates for these offices.

better known by her stage name, De-Ahna, has established All-Star Theatrical Agency, Inc., which is affiliated with Show World Productions, a worldwide talent agency based in Toronto, Canada.

"Together, we represent not only dancers, but vocalists, bands and other types of entertainers," she explained.

De-Ahna recently sent her first group of dancers to Honolulu, Hawaii for a three-month booking at Club Hubba-Hubba, where she had danced earlier this year.

She trains the dancers, choreographing their routines and providing them with advice on subjects ranging from investing their money to dealing with club managers, employees and customers.

She has 12 dancers going to Hawaii this summer and plans to help them get other international bookings later in places including Europe, Guam, Japan and Canada.

De-Ahna, a former Miss Philippines, said she is also currently managing two dancers who hold Miss Europe and Miss Portugal titles and a former Penthouse Magazine cover model.

Her affiliation with Show World helps her book the international tours, she said.

"I'm the only one doing this in the state of Mississippi. There is a lot of talent here but these people don't know where to get started. I felt I could help," De-Ahna explained.

"I do production shows only. These girls are exotic dancers. They are performing artists, not strippers."

She said a dancer can make anywhere from $400 per week to $3,000, depending upon where she is booked.

De-Ahna said she has strict requirements regarding her dancers and that her agency refuses to hire drug addicts, alcoholics or prostitutes. She prefers that a dancer be between 19 and 35 years old, but said she will hire older women "if they still look good at 40 or 50."

"Sometimes older women are better. Some older women look better than the younger ones because they are more mature, more professional," De-Ahna explained.

She stresses professionalism. In some of her training lectures, she explains that in addition to having a well choreographed, polished routine, a dancer must remember to "be a lady while performing."

The training period, during which De-Ahna helps a dancer with her routines and costume choices, varies according to the individual dancer's experience but is usually six to eight weeks.

Some experienced take instruction from De-Ahna at her Waveland home for as long as 12 weeks.

"If I like the way an inexperienced girl dances, the agency will take her on for one year and provide her with guaranteed employment. That can mean big money for a woman who knows how to save," she said.

De-Ahna, who bills herself as "Pearl of the Orient" and has booked her own act for a number of years, does only three or four tours each year now but says she has much experience on which to draw.

"I have been around and I have seen many, many things. I don't like about agents. I have seen agents who don't promote the girls the way they should be. They put them on the market like a piece of meat," she explained.

De-Ahna added that she plans to use as much local talent as possible.

"The girls I am sending this summer are all beauties of the South. Every one of them was discovered right here in Mississippi," she said.

She plans to "hire" at least 100 dancers in groups of 10 to 12 performers for each tour.

Her agency is open from 10 a.m. until 11 p.m. Monday through Saturday. More information is available at 467-6385.

RURAL RISK POOL IS NOW A REALITY

A mixture of problems contribute to the insurance disaster Mississippians now face when buying a homeowner's policy. Not only do you pay astronomical prices, you may not find a policy at all.

We can't make insurance companies come to Mississippi and write coverage they don't want to write. But we can assure the public that there will be a continued market.

In fact, this has already been done. In the next few weeks a Rural Risk Pool will be ready for operation. Your present agent will be able to place new business in this "Pool."

The premium for this coverage will be reasonable, not cheap. The policy available will not be a frilly homeowner's policy but will offer you, the consumer, a standard fire and lightning, wind and hail policy for both the structure and contents; the kind of policy you used to buy before the advent of the homeowner's plan we've come to know. This is sensible coverage that will satisfy your mortgage contract and will give you more latitude in selecting the amount of coverage that is needed.

State government is not in the business to compete with private enterprise, but it is our obligation to meet the needs of the public when the private markets do not fill the public need.

Who is responsible for making sure your needs are being met? In 1985 and again in 1986, the House of Representatives passed my amendments for the Rural Risk Pool. But the chairman of Insurance in the Senate made sure this legislation did not pass on the Senate floor.

Last summer I took to the road speaking to groups about fire protection and the Rural Risk Pool. By educating the public, and their senators, we gained the support we needed in the Senate.

This year the Rural Risk Pool passed! Persistence pays. If it had not been for this Representative, the issue would still be just an issue. When your elected official strongly supports the needs of her people, issues become answers.

Let proven performance and experience continue to work for you. Elect me your State Senator.

Investment firm to open office in Bay St. Louis

Craig Foster of the financial services firm Edward D. Jones & Co. is finalizing plans to open an office in Bay St. Louis.

Over the next few months Foster will begin introducing himself to the business people and residents of the area.

"We're very excited to extend our services to this area," said John Bachmann, managing partner of the firm.

"All our registered representatives have built their businesses with a genuine concern for their clients' welfare, and Craig will be able to continue this tradition by providing one-on-one service to the people of Hancock County and by offering only high-quality, conservative investments," he added.

Foster said, "I'm eager to become acquainted with all the people of Hancock County. I'm looking forward to settling down here and am planning to be an active member of the community."

Edward D. Jones & Co. was founded in 1871. Today, its home office is located in Maryland Heights, Mo., just outside St. Louis.

With more than 1,100 branch offices in small communities and metropolitan areas in 36 states, Edward D. Jones & Co. has become the largest financial services firm in the nation in terms of retail offices, Bachmann reports.

The firm's reputation is built on a conservative investment philosophy that stresses the importance of the individual investor, he said.

Edward D. Jones & Co. representatives sell low-risk securities such as federal tax-exempt bonds, mutual funds, common stock and tax-advantaged securities.

"A conservative philosophy and a dedication to client service has made the firm one of the most successful in the securities industry," Foster said.

BY
MC GUIRE
CAIRE

My father often said that he wouldn't think of eating leftovers, and would never tolerate them at table in any case - so I could almost feel his lingering disapproval from on high as I removed that big bowl of "sad sack," wilted leftover green salad from the refrigerator, and, instead of tossing it into the kitchen garbage can, stood there speculating on the possibilities of recycling the mixture.

Then, I remembered! With memory's eye I saw a scene from my growing up days - there was Mary, the old family cook, eyeing the bowl of leftover salad she had just taken out of the refrigerator, which she planned to turn into a truly authentic Gazpacho, that ever-so-delicious icy cold Spanish salad-soup or soup-salad - I've never been truly sure which it really is!

And, inasmuch as the old Spanish version of gazpacho includes vinegar, the salad dressing was no problem at all! And, as an added bonus, since I was taught early on that you must never drown the salad ingredients in dressing, and that the dressing must be much more good olive oil than vinegar, there was really no problem at all.

First, I drained the salad well, reserving the marinade. Then, to a cup of the cut-up tomatoes, cucumbers and bell (green) peppers I added some cold broth (you could also use V-8 or tomato juice or cold water). Then I splashed some lemon juice over, added some croutons, and there was my sort of emergency gazpacho!

Of course, there are endless variations on the theme of Gazpacho, that mainstay for so many years of workers in the fields of Spain. The workers had this pungent soup-of-sorts brought to them in the fields in cold earthenware jugs, always well chilled.

And, since the authentic Spanish version calls for vinegar, you can see why the thrifty housewife can easily recycle leftover salad - that is, if she sticks to basics and doesn't have too many extraneous bits and pieces in the salad.

And, just in case you don't have any leftover tomato, bell pepper and cucumber and onion salad on hand, here's a more less authentic version of Spain's icy cold summer treat. Here's:

GAZPACHO
1 onion, rather large, chopped fine
2 cloves garlic, chopped fine
2 Tbsp. parsley, chopped
1 tsp. salt (optional)
3 or 4 tomatoes, medium or large, chopped
1 cucumber, chopped
1 bell (green) pepper, chopped
1/3 cup olive oil
2 Tbsp. vinegar
1/2 cup bread crumbs or croutons, optional

Chop quite fine together the onion, garlic and parsley along with the salt (sometimes, I like to mash all this together in a mortar - the mortar and pestle make me feel that I'm following tradition! In the footsteps - or, rather - mashing and pounding in the first steps of long, long ago pioneer cooks - or something).

At any rate, chop the tomato, cucumber and green pepper (removing the seeds and white membrane from the pepper). Add the onion and garlic mixture and mix the whole business together.

Add the olive oil, just a bit at a time, also the vinegar, and mix well. Chill a few hours. You may wish to dilute this somewhat with ice water or tomato (or V-8) juice, though the authentic version doesn't. If you want a chilled soup, add one or the other. If you want salad, of course, don't.

And, if you wish, sprinkle bread crumbs or croutons over, just before serving, in bowls. (Four servings.)

P.S. At times, I like to add a dash of Angostura bitters to my gazpacho, for added flavor. For the soupy version, some cooks substitute chicken broth for the tomato juice or water. It's one of those "take your choice" recipes, and for me, depends upon what's on hand - I even chopped up some of the leftover lettuce in the salad, and added it to the mixture - and it was delicious!

HUD releases first annual report on FNMA

The 1986 report to Congress on the Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) has been released, according to Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, Samuel R. Pierce Jr.

"This report analyzes FNMA's relationship to the Federal Government," Pierce said, "and it provides policy options which could form the basis for an Administration proposal to privatize FNMA."

The report, an overview and analysis of FNMA operations prepared by HUD's Office of Policy Development and Research, points out that the historical direction laid out by Congress for FNMA has been a movement toward fully private status.

In discussing the future of FNMA, the report examines a wide range of possible options and time frames for totally removing the Federal presence from FNMA.

Dr. June Koch, assistant secretary for PD&R, said: "FNMA's current healthy status, the consistent policy direction set by the Congress, and the strength and innovative activity which currently characterizes the secondary mortgage market, allow us now to open a full discussion on the future of FNMA."

The report describes FNMA's "new business" strategy, which FNMA used to work its way out of financial difficulties encountered in the late 70's and early 80's.

It discusses how FNMA's role has evolved and changed since 1970 as the mortgage market experienced substantial growth and innovation.

The report also examines HUD's Congressionally-mandated oversight of FNMA, which focuses on conformance with FNMA's Charter purposes, and protection of the Federal Government's financial interests.

Copies of the FNMA Annual Report are available from HUD USER, 1-800-245-2691 (in Washington, D.C. Metropolitan area, call HUD USER at 301-251-5154).

Mobile Medic and Amserv have joined forces to give your family year-round protection anywhere on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

If you're already a member of Mobile Medic or Amserv, you now have twice as many reasons to renew your membership.

And if you're not already a member, we've given you twice as many reasons to join.

Because starting now, when you join one of our ambulance services, you automatically become a member of the other at no extra charge.

If you need an ambulance west of Debuys Road, Mobile Medic will respond. East of Debuys Road, Amserv will respond to your call.

No matter where you are in Hancock, Harrison and Jackson Counties, your family will get free emergency ambulance service any time you need it.

And all for one low annual price: just $39.

Emergency care: free to members...$425 to others.

A typical bill for ambulance service and emergency treatment runs around $425.

That's before you get your bills from the hospital, emergency room, or physician.

Your insurance or Medicare may only cover part of the cost. But your membership to Mobile Medic and Amserv covers your entire ambulance bill. You pay absolutely nothing.

And for an entire year, your membership covers you, your spouse, and all your unmarried children under 21 who live at home.

Why pay for service that you can get for free?

Mobile Medic and Amserv are the only ambulance services operating on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

We handle emergency medical treatment for everyone in our area, including non-members.

But while non-members pay for all treatment, supplies and ambulance service, our members pay nothing above the annual $39 membership fee for local service.

If you call us only once in eleven years, your membership will have paid for itself. That's why it's smart to join now.

You must respond by July 31st.

We can only accept memberships once a year. This year's deadline is July 31st.

Over 15,000 Gulf Coast families belong to either Mobile Medic or Amserv. And now that we've joined forces, our members will begin enjoying free ambulance service in all three Gulf Coast Counties. That's twice the protection, for one low price.

So, we invite you to renew your membership now. Or to sign up with us for the first time, if you're not currently a member.

Fill out the application below and send it with your check today.

Mobile Medic's service area is west of Debuys Road. Amserv's service area is east of Debuys Road. But now, when you join one, you automatically get a free membership in the other at no charge. So your family is covered anywhere on the Mississippi Gulf Coast, in Hancock, Harrison, and Jackson Counties.

Outside of Harrison County call 1-868-1126 at no charge to you.

Here's a baseball riddle you can have some fun with...How can a team get three triples and three singles in one inning, and still not score a run?...Answer: First two men triple and are out at the plate trying for an inside-the-park homer...Next man triples and stays a third...Next two men get infield singles with the runner holding third...Last man smacks a ground ball that hits runner going from first to second...Batter gets credit for a hit, but runner is out, making three triples, three singles, three outs...and no runs!

Do you have any idea what was the smallest city ever to have a big league baseball team?...Answer is Troy, NY...Troy was in the National League from 1879 to 1882.

Here's one hard to believe, but it's true...There was a big league baseball team that was in LAST place as late as Aug. 30 one year - and yet they still won the pennant...The New York Mets were in last place on Aug. 30, 1973 - but despite that, they, incredibly, won the pennant that season.

$149 million awarded in two ship contracts

Two contracts totaling nearly $149 million have been awarded for Navy ship construction work at Mississippi Gulf Coast shipyards, according to Senator Thad Cochran.

The senator said the Navy has awarded a contract for $115,586,251 to Lockheed Shipbuilding Company for seven LCAC landing craft vehicles to be built at the firm's Gulfport yard.

Also, the Navy has contracted with the Ingalls Shipbuilding Division of Litton Systems for $33,410,290 for facilities involving the CG-47 class guided missile cruisers. The funds call for fabrication and installation of training facilities at the Pascagoula shipyard, with completion of the contract work by September 1991.

The contract with Lockheed for work at the Gulfport shipyard is expected to be completed by June 1991, the Navy said.

Cochran, a member of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Defense, said "I am pleased this important national defense work will be done at our excellent shipyards on the Gulf Coast."

PVT GIANAKIS

Private Mark Gianakis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip D. Graham of Clermont Harbor, recently completed basic training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

He has been assigned to Fort Lee, Va. for further training. Gianakis, a 1986 Hancock North Central High School graduate, joined the U.S. Army in February.

Women's distance festival run set for July 18

The Gulf Coast Road Runners Club and AMI Garden Park Community Hospital will cooperate in the nationwide celebration of women's running.

The vitality, vigor and joy of women's running will be enthusiastically demonstrated in a national day of races on Saturday, July 18, according to Janet Vega, hospital spokesperson.

Chapters of the Road Runners

Club of America will simultaneously stage running events across the country.

For the past several years, AMI Garden Park Community Hospital has been the host for this "healthy" event and once again, on July 18, women, men, and children are invited to run together in the Women's Distance Festival.

Race-day registration will be from 7:45 a.m. at the hospital entrance, 1520 Broad Avenue, Gulfport.

The course has been accurately measured—flat two mile loop beginning and ending at the hospital with an aid station at one mile.

The men's race will also be two miles, rather than one as in previous years.

The entry fee is $5.

For more information contact Karen Moore at 864-2706 or Janet Vega at 864-4210.

Swimming registration deadline set July 22

BY DENA BISNETTE

The City of Waveland Summer Recreation Program is taking registrations for swimming lessons until July 22.

According to Clarence Harris, director of the program, a cooperative program has been worked out with St. Stanislaus to provide Waveland children with swimming lessons.

The classes will be limited to 100 students.

A $2 donation to benefit Red Cross will be charged for the program, scheduled for July 27-31. Classes will be provided from 11 a.m. until noon each day.

Harris said children of any age may participate, but they must be at least four feet six inches tall because they must be able to stand up in the pool.

Participants must provide their own transportation to the St. Stanislaus pool.

Registration may be made by calling Waveland City Hall at 467-4134.

Harris said anyone interested in tennis lessons is also asked to contact city hall. A tennis class has been proposed for later this summer and will be offered if enough participants are available for a class.

SPORTS FROM THE PRESSBOX

By Jim Stallworth

The people at CBS/Fox Video have created a new division devoted entirely to sports programming. That means that fans will be able to purchase video sports cassettes at games, their favorite sporting goods or video stores.

Ken Ross, director of sports and video programming and head of this new project at CBS/Fox, states, "This won't be just sports on video, but video sports." Fans will see outstanding plays, highlights, bloopers, and superstar profiles put to music and combined with other special effects. This venture will usher in a whole new genre of sports video.

CBS/Fox plans to release two videos later this month, "Play Ball with Mickey Mantle: Baseball Beyond the Basics," featuring Gary Carter and Tom Seaver, and "Dr. J's Basketball Stuff," at a suggested retail price of $19.98.

The NBA is more than excited to have CBS/Fox initiate this new marketing plan. Why? Because CBS/Fox has the exclusive programming rights to the NBA. That means that the NBA will probably get a little more exposure than other sports with sports video. NBA Commissioner, David Stern, summed up the League's enthusiasm when he commented, "I like the idea of our tapes being sold alongside Barbra Streisand and Bill Joel." Not quite, Commissioner, but it's evident that CBS/Fox realizes there's plenty of money to be made with the video market, and they're going to get it.

Getting in Shape

There's no doubt about it. Every year, more and more Americans participate in sports and fitness activities. They have many goals: improved fitness, weight loss, more energy, better health or to improve in their favorite sport.

Yet, when surveys report on the number of people who exercise regularly at levels vigorous enough to achieve these goals, the number of true participants drops. You see, it takes a little more than just a weekly game of tennis or an occasional swim to become fit.

First, to improve the fitness of your heart and lungs, it is necessary to do some form of cardiorespiratory endurance exercise at least three times each week for a minimum of 20 minutes each workout. This form of exercise, known as aerobic exercise, uses large muscle groups and requires a lot of oxygen. As your heart pumps hard to bring oxygen and nutrients to your muscles, it gets stronger and healthier. Some popular aerobic exercises are walking, jogging, swimming, aerobic dancing, cycling and cross-country skiing.

Muscular strengthening exercises are also important. Strong muscles are less likely to be injured and they make it easier to do endurance exercises for extended periods of time. Also, strong abdominal muscles help prevent lower back pain, which is a common problem today.

The most popular way to build strength is with equipment. Muscle strength is increased when you make a muscle group work harder than it normally does. This usually means performing an exercise eight to ten times (this equals one set) and doing a total of three sets with a brief rest between each one.

For some people, a two pound hand weight will be all they can manage. Stronger people will require a heavier weight. The important thing to remember is to choose the weight and equipment that is right for you. It's always good to get some expert help when you're just beginning.

I recommend a minimum of two twenty minute sessions of strengthening exercises a week. Three or four are fine, as long as you don't do all your workouts consecutively. Your muscles need at least 24 hours to recuperate from a strength workout.

Exercises such as pushups, situps and leg raises build muscle endurance, which is the ability to repeat a movement requiring strength over and over again without resting. Muscular strength and muscular endurance are closely related. You must achieve a certain degree of strength to have high levels of endurance.

Finally, no program is complete without flexibility exercises. Stretching all the major muscle groups on a daily basis is important to ease such health problems as lower back pain and possibly arthritis. When your muscles and joints are flexible, you are less likely to get injured and you will feel better overall.

Always remember to warm up your body before doing any type of vigorous exercise or before you do your stretches. Walking in place, arm circles, knee lifts and other limbering exercises raise the temperature of your muscles and make it easier and safer for you to do your workout. At the end of your workout, gradually come to a stop so that you don't put too much stress on your heart. Stretch as part of your cooldown.

Summer fishing tips

The summer period can be the real test of a bass enthusiast's love of the sport. This two to four month time frame is highlighted by an overabundance of food and stable fishing patterns. Fishing is tough and bass tend to hold in locational patterns. During summer, weather plays an important role in determining the success of any outing.

As far as fishing a theoretical lake during this period, Ken Cook, Evinrude Pro Staff member, has quite a number of excellent tips to share with an anxious angler.

"Where and what type of habitat you're going to fish almost totally determines what type of lure you use. As far as the summer season, the grassbed is the most common denominator among lowland shallow water lakes. The bass will relate to that almost without exception. The key to catching these fish is controlling a great deal at this time of year by pH (the acidity or alkalinity of the water), which is very important at this time of year."

There are 14 steps in the pH measurement with seven being neutral, those numbers below seven show increasing acidity, those above seven increasing alkalinity. The pH levels measure the hydrogen-ion concentration: where there is little oxygen in the water, there is more acid; where there is more oxygen in the water, there is more alkalinity. Bass shy away from acid waters.

"So, generally, the daily pattern is that you can catch bass around the shallow parts of the grassbed early in the day because the pH is low and it's comfortable at that time," Cook continues. "It then goes up as the sunlight increases the photosynthesis, and that increases the pH. So the fish will retreat to the shady part of the grassbed, if there are suitable spaces in it. If the grassbed is very dense so there's not any space amongst it, then the bass will go away from it and suspend."

What lures does Cook favor under these conditions? "You can fish a topwater bait in the morning across the grassbed, a buzzbait or spinnerbait, and catch bass very successfully. But usually that quits about 9 or 10 o'clock."

Then you have to get deep into that grassbed with a heavy worm or jig by flipping it through the vegetation, or you'll find yourself in a real tough catching situation with suspended bass away from cover."

Ken Cook keys in on habitat availability on large man-made impoundments and reservoirs.

"Bass in the summertime usually relate to the main body of the lake. If you have a big lake, my patterns revolve around main lake structure—and there are some exceptions to that especially if there's current."

"But for the average reservoir where there's no current, I can eliminate the upper ends of coves, back ends of the creeks, and most of the sides. That means I'll be fishing a smaller part of the reservoir; the main body of the lake, the main river points and drops."

Where do bass tend to congregate or "associate" on reservoirs during the summer period?

"The bass tend to be associated on convex structures: humps, ridges and structures that come up off the bottom."

A lot of times they will be associated with the edge of a river or creek channel because there tends to be a little hump at the edge of a river channel. In summertime I'm looking for mid-water structures, main lake structures: humps, ridges, points, edges that border deep water, roadbeds, etc."

Most professional and amateur bass tournaments require all entrants to wear an approved personal flotation device (PFD) whenever the outboard is running. It's a good idea to wear a PFD whenever you're on the water, and now Johnson and Evinrude dealers have made that a little easier with a new PFD designed just for bass fishermen. The arm holes are generously cut for ease of movement, and the side laces are adjustable to help keep you cool in any weather.

Have any questions you'd like a bass pro to answer? Jot them down and mail them to "Bassin' with the Pros" at this newspaper. Answers to your questions will appear in a future column.

These days, it's hard to find anything certain—except change.

But, when you look closely,

you see something else:

people, groups and communities

transmitting strong basic values from generation to generation.

Certainly, the world's changing;

but it's good to know that some things stay the same.

We generate power for living.

The University of Pittsburgh may have to play the 1987 football season without two of their stars. Charles Gladman, a running back, and Teryl Austin, a defensive back, are both considered to be potential All-American players at their positions with a future in the NFL, but they allegedly received money from agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom during their junior years. That would be a violation of NCAA rules and make both players ineligible to play. Walters and Bloom have been accused of making payments to college players when the athletes still have eligibility remaining. Former University of Alabama basketball star Derrick McKay was declared ineligible for his senior season because he received payments. McKay has since become a first round pick in the recent NBA draft.

Greg Lemond, who became the first American to win the Tour De France, said he will return to cycling competition in the five-day Whiskey Creek Stage Race, held July 22-26 in Yosemite California. Lemond has been recovering from a near fatal gunshot wound after being shot in the back during a hunting accident.

Ron Hextall, who won the Conn Smythe Trophy as the Most Valuable Player during the Stanley Cup Playoffs and the Vezina Trophy as the National Hockey League's best goaltender, was suspended for the first games of the 1987-1988 season. Hextall slashed Kent Nilsson of the Edmonton Oilers during the fourth game of the Stanley Cup Finals. The league suspended Hextall after determining the blow to the back of Nilsson's knee was deliberate and severe.

SPORTS TRIVIA

1. Name the race car driver who set the single season earnings record in the Indy-type car class.
2. Who holds the American League Rookie record with 37 home runs?
3. What active Major League player has the most career pinch hits?
4. Rookie Mark McGwire of the Oakland A's recently set two records. What were they?
5. Who was the last player before McGwire to have scored nine runs in nine consecutive plate appearances?

KEEPING FIT

When you first began your athletic training in high school, it was okay, in fact required, to wear those uniform blue jumpers with the elastic waistband and snaps up front. Then came college where gray sweats and a t-shirt were acceptable and conveniently affordable. But now that you're all grown up and serious about getting in shape, there is what is called in athletic vernacular - Power Dressing - or specialized clothing. No, the philosophy is not, "It doesn't matter what you do, it's how you look." Specialized clothing is not vain, it's practical and functional. Whatever your sport happens to be, athletic clothing should do two things: provide freedom of movement and maintain proper body temperature.

ANSWERS TO SPORTS TRIVIA

1. Bobby Rahal - 1986. He won the Indy 500 and five other Indy car races. Total earnings: $1,488,049.
2. Al Rosen - 1950 Cleveland Indians.
3. Greg Gross - Philadelphia Phillies.
4. McGwire was the first rookie to hit five home runs in a two-game span and the last player to have scored nine runs in nine consecutive plate appearances.
5. Stan Musial - 1948.
6. Texas Rangers - finished in second place in 1974.
7. Atlantic Coast Conference.

THIS WEEK'S HOROSCOPE

BY SALOME

Weekly Tip: Progressive ideas yield interesting results.

Aries (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) Your contemporaries can prove to be much fun. Try not to worry over the mental tasks you must tend to. Accept the conditions and work with them.

Taurus (Apr. 20-May 20) You could find yourself in a compromising situation, especially where finances are concerned. Be prepared to pack in a flash; a trip is in the offing.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Don't let your impulsive side get the best of you. Now is the time for you to lay low with family. Do that summer reading you've been putting off.

Cancer (June 21-July 20) Take yourself out on a shopping spree, but only if you can afford it. People around you are especially cheerful, and they know you're the cause.

Leo (Jul. 21-Aug. 22) Take time off from your hectic schedule to do the things you like best; you deserve it. Don't forget to call friends.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your melancholic nature may be making you uptight, so try having fun to relieve stress. Problems can become advantageous if handled properly.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You have been trying to get your ideas across to others, but success isn't in the stars. Shelve these ideas for a better time.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Those people you know in influential places are anxious to help you now, so seek out these individuals. Show your chums that you're a good friend.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) If you listen to others carefully, you will get good results. Be more romantic with the one you love. The weekend can be happy and worthwhile.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep the promises you have made to your loved ones. Make some effort to call those people who are important.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) After you handle your important affairs, get yourself to the beach or park. Rely on your own resources for the best results; the payoff will be great.

Pisces (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) Take your sweetheart to the most romantic place you can think of. Your special touches will make things perfect.

If you were born this week, your charm and magnetism have made you quite popular with your contemporaries. You can get into trouble, however, if you use this as your only resource.

Colonizing bees damage walls

Inside houses

MISSISSIPPI STATE-A small hole or crack in a wall can be a tempting choice for swarming bees starting a new colony.

Whatever problems "househunting" bees create with their presence are nothing compared with those they can leave inside a wall, according to Dr. James Jarrott, an entomologist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

"People who see bees on their wall may fall to see the significance of those bees having to do with activity within the wall," Jarrott said. "People think if they can go right up to the bees and treat them there, then the problem is taken care of."

When bees enter a wall to begin a colony, they initially build wax combs to raise more bees and to store honey. Once the colony is established, the comb-building and honey-making activities are constant.

The homeowner must choose whether to attempt removal of the bees from the wall by trapping them in a decoy hive or to kill them with chemicals. Either way, the decaying waste from the colony - unhatched bees, unprocessed nectar, honey and the comb - must completely be cleaned out of the wall.

If the bees are killed, then their decaying remains must also be removed, too. "Once you kill the bees already in the hive, the hive and the dead bees start deteriorating," Jarrott said. "Then you've got another set of problems if you don't act quickly."

Odor from the decaying hive attracts other insect pests, such as the dermestid beetle, the carpet beetle and the clothes beetle, Jarrott said. After these pests finish feeding on hive decay, they look for the other

"These beetles can do the same damage."

Removal of bee colonies from inside walls is best performed by pest control professionals and Extension county agents have control information available at their offices.

Before the bees can be removed, they must be located within the wall. Homeowners can try tapping on the wall, preferably at night, and listening for a loud buzzing sound.

Location of bees may also be confirmed by feeling differences in wall temperature. Bees maintain a temperature of 93 degrees F at the nest center of the colony and the temperature is high enough to warm the wall next to the bees.

food sources, particularly natural fibers, wool and cotton.

The fermenting honey, if left inside the wall, can rot wood and thus weaken the foundation of the house.

"Most people, when they think of something eating their clothes, think of clothes moths," Jarrott said.

Polymers could provide economic boost for Mississippi

A $10 million federal appropriation for construction of an ultra-modern polymer science complex in this "Hub City" of southeast Mississippi has local development officials looking their chops about the potential economic benefits.

Congress approved the funding last fall as part of the Critical Agricultural Materials Act for construction of the facility at the University of Southern Mississippi, which boasts one of only seven polymer science departments in the nation and the only one in the South.

"To my knowledge, this is the largest single federal appropriation to be made to a Mississippi college or university for construction of a building," USM President Aubrey K. Lucas pointed out, predicting development of a "world class academic department."

Hattiesburg newspaper editor Bob Gordon, in a recent column, wrote good naturedly that he had investigated to find out "just what the heck a polymer was" and discovered they are the chemically-linked molecules that compose practically everything—from space suits to artificial hearts to ship hull coatings.

"They cover the tiles in your kitchens, are additives in motor oil and compose the soles of your Adidas running shoes," Gordon wrote.

The USM Polymer Science Institute, planned for construction in 1988, will house administrative offices, classrooms, research laboratories, instrumental labs and a "high bay" area to accommodate large equipment needed for a pilot plant operation.

"Basically, we'll develop a product that we can take to industry and say, 'Okay, we've developed the idea, we've done that research, we've completed the pilot operation and now it's ready to go into full-scale production,'" explained Dr. Shelby Thames, a USM polymer science expert who helped found the department in 1978.

The planned institute, according to Polymer Science Department Chairman Gordon Nelson, current president of the nationally prestigious American Chemical Society, will stimulate a research industry with a potential payroll of $1.6 million.

"I think few people really recognize the importance of a major higher education institution in terms of plant site locations, but when it comes down to the last few sites an industry is looking at, then it comes down to what resources are in the area that the industry can draw on," Nelson said in a recent newspaper interview.

He pointed out the plastics industry in America is a multi-billion dollar industry and that in Mississippi, it is a quarter-billion dollar industry consisting of 230 companies and 19,000 employees. Plastics, he noted, is just one part of the polymer industry.

Gordon predicted the planned research center would provide considerable avenues economic development officials could utilize to attract new industry to Mississippi and the Hattiesburg area.

Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., and Reps. James Whitten, D-Miss., and Trent Lott, R-Miss., were instrumental in getting the $10 million appropriation through Congress. They plan another effort this year to get an additional $4.6 million to equip the facility.

SUSAN TRENTTEL of Bay St. Louis has received a scholarship from Loyola University, New Orleans. Trentel, a student at Our Lady Academy, has received a Recognition Scholarship of $500 per year.

Also, Robert K. Daniels, executive vice president of the Hattiesburg Area Chamber of Commerce, is working with city and university leaders to secure financial support from the Mississippi Legislature to help staff the expanded USM polymer program.

A recent report by the state Performance Evaluation and Expenditure Review Committee, a legislative investigating panel, urged that the Institute for Technology Development improve its relationship with state universities and set realistic goals in its economic development effort.

The ITD, headquartered at the state Research and Development Center in Jackson, was established some 18 months ago with $36 million in state, federal and private funding, with a goal of helping state universities translate technology, including USM's polymer science know-how, into industrial development.

Faulkner-Yoknapatawpha Conference slated at Ole Miss August 2-7

UNIVERSITY, Miss.—Highlights of the 14th annual Faulkner and Yoknapatawpha Conference at The University of Mississippi Aug. 2-7 will include an appearance by author Eudora Welty, unveiling of a new William Faulkner postage stamp, scholarly lectures, tours and two artistic presentations.

The theme of the conference is "Faulkner and the Craft of Fiction." Sponsors are the Department of English and the Center for the Study of Southern Culture.

The conference gets underway Sunday, Aug. 2, with presentation of the Eudora Welty Awards to young Mississippi secondary school writers who aspire to continue the state's literary tradition. The presentation will be followed by a reading and discussion with Miss Welty.

Other Sunday events are a buffet supper and a lecture by renowned Faulkner scholar Cleanth Brooks. On Monday, the U.S. Postal Service will formally issue its Faulkner stamp in a late morning ceremony. From Monday afternoon through Friday, 15 scholars will lecture on topics relating to Faulkner's writing craft.

Tours of North Mississippi are scheduled for Tuesday. A picnic is set for Rowan Oak, Faulkner's home, on Wednesday. "Voices from Yoknapatawpha," a program of dramatic readings selected and arranged by conference director Evans Harrington, professor of English, will be presented on Thursday evening.

The conference will conclude on Friday evening with "Faulkner's Artistry and the Arts of Black America," a program of readings, music, dance, and slides directed by Sister Thea Bowman of the Catholic

Registration fee for the event is $125. For registration and further information, contact the Center for the Study of Southern Culture at Ole Miss, University, MS 38677, or telephone (601) 232-5393.

MSU to offer 'Top Gun' course for success-oriented

Mississippi State University is offering a new course this fall for incoming freshmen who are committed to success.

University 1000, a three-credit-hour course, will provide personal attention from top teachers.

Proposed by psychology professor Tom Carskadon, university 1000 is loosely modeled after a similar program at the University of South Carolina.

According to Carskadon, University 1000 is the academic equivalent of "Top Gun," the Navy fighter pilot training program popularized in the movie of the same name.

"Only truly outstanding faculty will be teaching it," he said, "the best of the best available."

The course will deal with study skills, time management, critical thinking, and speed-reading. In addition, Carskadon said students will learn which personality types are most compatible in careers and marriage.

He added that University 1000 will include careful academic and career advising.

"The average student changes majors three times during his or her college career," Carskadon explained. "These changes are costly in terms of time and money."

Students will learn critical thinking, including how to define a question, evaluate it and search for hard evidence to solve it.

Carskadon said that specific problems, sometimes controversial, will be addressed to help students develop and practice critical thinking skills.

Vice President for Academic Affairs John Darling said the course "will be the foundation on which students can build successful college careers." He added, "Before they can learn, they must be able to study efficiently, reason and make discerning judgments—and this course will train them to do so."

MSU has a national reputation for psychological research into personality types, Carskadon said, and students in the course will get the benefit of this knowledge.

"They will learn how to communicate with different personality types, how to identify and understand their own types and how to use its knowledge both on the job and in personal relationships."

The course will be taught in five 25-student sections. It will apply as an elective in any major which allows for a 1000-level elective course.

University 1000 is unique because it is designed for and is open to all freshman students, Carskadon added.

MUW paralegal program approved by bar association

Mississippi University for Women's paralegal program has been approved by the American Bar Association.

"MUW's paralegal program is the first in Mississippi to receive ABA approval," said Dr. Billy D. Pounds, program director.

Final approval was granted to MUW's program at the midyear meeting of the ABA House of Delegates Feb. 16.

"I feel ABA approval will assist us in recruiting a greater number of quality students into our paralegal program," said Dr. Pounds. "We are now one of 97 ABA approved programs in the United States."

Dr. James W. Strobel, MUW president, said, "We are extremely pleased that this excellent academic program has received ABA approval. This reaffirms our strong belief in the quality of the education this university and its faculty provide our students, our community, state and nation. It also represents the accomplishment of yet another milestone in MUW's quality assurance program."

"The faculty, the students and the advisory committee in the paralegal program are to be commended for their special efforts to gain this recognition," added Dr. Strobel.

Approval by ABA follows a lengthy application process. Paralegal faculty in the Division of Business and Economics submitted a self-evaluation report in March 1985. Following a review of the report, a three-member team comprised of representatives of an ABA Approval Commission conducted an on-site inspection of MUW's program.

Arthur R. Littleton, chairman of ABA's Standing Committee on Legal Assistant, stated in a letter to MUW officials, "In view of the content of the self-evaluation report and the conclusions drawn by the visitation team, the Standing Committee on Legal Assistants found the paralegal program to be in compliance with the Guidelines for the Approval of Legal Assistant Education Programs and thus recommended to the House of Delegates that it receive final approval."

ABA's final approval for the MUW program is for a period of five years.

Initiated in 1979, MUW's paralegal program has grown rapidly due to the demand for trained legal assistants, said Dr. Pounds. There are approximately 125 majors enrolled in the eight-year-old academic program.

"The purpose of the paralegal program," said Dr. Pounds, "is to equip students with the skills and knowledge necessary to assume a key role on the professional team assisting attorneys in providing more personal, efficient and economical legal services."

MUW senior Karen Jouett of Columbus Air Force Base, a paralegal major, feels ABA approval will provide advantages for MUW graduates.

"Graduates of the program will have some edge over graduates of a non-approved school in employment opportunities. Furthermore, the ABA guidelines which govern the paralegal program set high standards. I feel these standards ensure that MUW graduates will be able to do an excellent job when they are employed," said Mrs. Jouett.

Nancy Ray of Ethelville, Ala., a senior paralegal major, also sees benefits in program approval. "As a student I feel ABA approval will give our diplomas more credibility as well as be an attribute for the university as a whole."

Teacher Talk

Left-handedness is normal for many

Our oldest child is left-handed but my wife and I are right-handed, should we try to change her before she starts to school next year?

Doctors, psychologists and educators have varied opinions as to how to fit the left-handed child into the right-handed world. Some say that during the first four years of childhood the children's handedness may change back and forth but by the time they are ready for school a definite hand preference for specific activities has been established.

Your child seems to be ready to use her left hand more than she uses her right hand, this is natural for her. Don't try to change her now, just remember that left-handed children are very special because the majority of children are right-handed.

Research tells us that if both parents are left-handed then 50 percent of the children could be left-handed, too. However, if both parents are right handed only two percent of the children will be left-handed. Your child is in this range.

Doctors tell us we might discourage left-handedness in very young children by giving things to them in such a way that encourages them to use their right hands. The importance of working with any child and especially the left-handed child, is to accept his or her handedness as normal.

Just remember your daughter is living in a right-handed world, using right-handed tools and adapting them to her left-handed way of life. Some might think of the word "clumsy" when they watch a left-handed child learning to use right-handed equipment but I think the word "clever" or "creative" should be the right word for the left-handed.

Writing seems to be the hardest subject for the left-handed child to master. Perhaps this is true because the teacher is right-handed and the desks are designed for right-handed students. Writing instruction requires the same rules for left-handed children as it does for right-handed.

Only the hand is different. In cursive writing the paper is slanted the opposite direction for the left-handed student. Patience and encouragement should be a part of the writing program, too.

Pressures Of Sex Confront Teens

By Ann F. Jarratt
4-H Youth Development Specialist
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

Sex has occupied people's minds as long as there have been people. It is also a subject that people may tell you they know everything about when they actually have only misinformation.

The media give you millions of messages about the glamor of sex because sex sells. Adults who care about you personally often tell you nothing. It is confusing.

One young person wrote: "What would you do if a guy you like knows that you like him, but all he likes you for is sex?" There's a lot more to the human personality than sexuality. Everyone has the capacity for friendship, for laughter, for kindness and sharing ideas and feelings.

Only wanting to have one's personal needs/wants met without regard for the other person is selfish and uncaring. The common expression for that is "using" the other person. Who wants to be used like an object?

Someone else asked a similar question but with a little different twist, "How do you say 'no' to your date if you don't want to have sex?" Get your vocal cords in gear, open your mouth and say, "NO!" It is your body. It is your life. It is your choice. What happens will be your consequences to deal with.

Be sure that what you say in words and what your appearance and actions communicate give your date the same message. If you dress and act sexy, don't be surprised if you are treated as a sex object.

Several questioners referred to "liking" or "loving" a person as reasons for having sex with him. The best definition I know for love which separates it from passion or lust is that if you love someone, you want the very best for the one loved even if it is not what you want most yourself.

Ask this question then. Is it evidence of love if a person asks me to do something which my parents would disapprove of, which I am not emotionally ready for, which could produce a child which I could not provide for adequately? Are any of those situations ones which would produce happiness for you and help insure a future in which you could fulfill the goals you've set?

Try your hand with this question. "Why does a guy tell untrue stories about a gal with whom he has a date?" Any ideas?

Try these possibilities—he's trying to make himself sound experienced and worldly or trying to impress his buddies. Or, he feels as if he doesn't fit in with the crowd, so he's trying to make them believe he's macho. A confident person who respects himself and his date doesn't lie and doesn't need to boast. A caring person would never say or do anything to damage someone else's reputation.
